TROJANS PLACE FAR IN LEAD IN EASTERN MEET

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 31.—The Southern California's infantry 20 man squad, already out-con-favorites, today as good as won the I. C. 4-A track and field championship when the Trojans performed the unprecedented feat of qualifying every contestant who was given a test.

Sixteen of the 20 Trojans competed in the 11 events for which qualifications had been ordered and everyone of them came out, the remaining four are contestants in the four events for which no qualifications were held.

PLACING TOLDS.—This wholesale placing of U. S. C. men not only made victory for the Los Angeles squad a foregone conclusion but was calculated to pave the way for an all-time high total of points. The record for team scoring is 62 3-4 set by the U. S. C. team three years ago.

To complete the rout of Easterners by squads from the coast, California was second in today's qualifying tests, placing eight men and Stanford's team of four specialists won five places.

Speaking of Sports

MARIETTA, Ga., May 31.—UP.—Crews from the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Wisconsin, Rutgers, Manhattan, Rollins and Marietta college will meet here Saturday in the 25th American rowing regatta. The race here over the Ohio river will be the biggest event ever held in the Mid West.

The two mile straight-away over which the shells will race has been called by some experts one of the finest rowing courses in the country. Race sponsors sought and received the aid of United States engineers in improving the racing stretch. The engineers have worked out a plan of stabilized water control which will guarantee almost perfect rowing conditions.

WILL CONTROL DAM.—The day of the race, current meters will be attached to logs and floated in the six foot lanes. If velocities are found, the conditions will be corrected by regulating the flow of water from the government dam above the course. This method will eliminate the possibility of unequal racing conditions which has led to dissatisfaction among crews racing annually at Poughkeepsie.

In addition to regulating the current, the government has agreed to furnish six stake boats, to be anchored in perfect alignment at the starting line. A man at each stake boat will hold a shell in position so a clean break may be had by all at the start.

Holy Smokes! Did you make a 'straight-flush' on a two card draw?

I certainly did. I guess that's catchin' 'em! Hey, gang! Oh baby! And I stayed on a four, five and six of diamonds.

Of course, he dealt, that gave him some advantage. He is also nimble fingered and quick. Now then, put one and one together and there is absolutely no reason why we should be mystified or even consider him lucky.

I opened with a pat straight and Jim gave me a tilt and when it got around to him he gave me another hike on his 'three straight flush' which was very strange.

Aw, don't be rough with him, maybe he had a hunch.

Or a strange deck! Look on the floor.

BEAR CREW TO TAKE PART IN EASTERN RACE

BERKELEY, May 31.—UP—The 1935 University of California crew team, which won the Poughkeepsie regatta last year—stroked thru the water two workouts today before leaving for the eastern race Sunday night.

Coach Carroll Eoright, former coxswain of championship Washington crews, was to have announced lineups for both varsity and jayvee eights today, but said tonight final selections of the two crews and alternates would not be made until Saturday.

On the basis of workouts for the past week, it appeared probable that at least five members of last year's eight, as well as the coxswain, Regg Watt, would be in the first boat at start of the Hudson race.

With the exception of Carroll Brigham, No. 4, all the former champions have been banished to the second boat in previous races this year, including the Washington regatta. Rowing against a crew made up almost entirely of men with no varsity experience, the University of California eight took a 10-minute rest on the Hudson.

Eoright is confident the return to form of last year's champions will give the California shell the added power necessary to defeat the Washington oarsmen in their eastern meeting.

The four 1934 varsity men who are expected to fill their old positions in the June 15 race are Lawrence Dodge, No. 7; Ray Anderson, No. 3; Evald Swanson, No. 4 and Jack Yates, No. 2. Other probable starters are Gene Berkenkamp, stroke; Tevis Thompson, No. 6 and Harley Fremming, No. 5.

California, winners in 1932 and 1934, have a chance this year to win the Poughkeepsie race three times in three days, something no crew has accomplished since 1912. The race was not held in 1933.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, May 31.—The word engineer usually conjures up a hooded figure poring over sets of bridge plans or a keen-eyed fellow in dungarees leaning out of a locomotive cab.

But in Hollywood, where mailed Crusaders ride in fivers and criss-cross their days off, things are different. A typical studio engineer for example, is A. C. Zoulis of Paramount who looks more like an attorney or a banker.

Zoulis, a former army engineer, has charge of practically everything that safeguards employees from accidents. Also he superintends the making and maintenance of up-to-the-minute maps of all studio air, gas and water lines.

He can tell you at once the exact amount of floor space on a sound stage, the heights and areas of all buildings on the lot and a world of other seemingly useless information that suddenly becomes vastly important when it comes to producing a picture.

It was Zoulis who worked out a formula for fireproofing wires, backdrops and clothing used on the sets. The commercial preparations, it was found, either caused stains or had some other feature that prevented their use in films.

Before Zoulis conceived the formula actors took their own chances while working around fire.

The engineer also inspects sets where there is any danger of a scaffolding or staircase collapsing from the weight of the actors. Each is designed to support a set weight and Zoulis checks to make certain there is a good margin of safety.

Zoulis' department builds dunes when a lake is necessary in a film sequence, designs cities for others. Sometimes he even blows them up. He likes those kind. Lots of fun, he says.

JAMES CAGNEY IS STARRED IN FILM AT FOX

"G-Men" starring James Cagney ends its three-day run at the Fox today. The production is shared to be one of the outstanding hits of the year and has broken attendance records wherever it has been shown.

"G-Men" is headed with fiction, a picture of the government agents' fight on public enemies. Among the highlight pictures are: The Brooklyn money truck and Midwest bank robberies, Kansas City depot massacre and Wisconsin brandy hangout battle which made front page history and are enacted with telling force.

Cagney plays the part of a "bribe" who abandons his practice and becomes a federal agent to avenge the slaying of his friend, Reels Tommy, also a government operator. Cagney's schooling was financed by William Harrison, a racketeer chief who decides to go straight. Cagney's acquaintances with Edward G. Robinson, Ann Dvorak and Barton MacLane, Harrying friends, become invaluable when Cagney enters government service.

Cagney adds his own touch, Robert Armstrong, in directing Pauline, and Lucille LaVerne, Mary Kay, of London, Armstrong's sister, who has been held hostage by MacLane.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, May 29.—UP—Senator David A. Reed delivered a speech before the American Iron and Steel Institute in New York last week which exposed much criticism from the press that editorialists, who know what is going on behind the scenes, consider it the most significant political utterance made in many months.

Reed, a life-long Republican regular, intimate of Andrew W. Mellon, confidant of Herbert Hoover, proposed that conservative Republicans unite with conservative Democrats against Roosevelt in 1936.

"Artificial distinction of party and sectional prejudice," said the Pennsylvania Republican, "cannot be allowed to divide that vast majority of the American people which is wholly sane. A public man can do no greater service to his country at this hour than to bring it to pass that some American, wherever they party heretofore, unite to support sound and honest candidates upon a sound and honest platform of political principles."

A statement of this kind coming from Reed would be of great importance under any circumstances. But what makes it doubly significant is the fact that Reed and the powerful interests he represents are secretly active in pushing a plan to place a conservative union slate in the field next year.

Not only have Old Guard Democrats and Republican political leaders been left out on the mitten, but his campaign contributors have been approached.

It looks like the beginning of the long-heralded split of the Democratic and Republican parties.

The Van Bibber, Missouri Senator, would make no complaint if the post office failed to deliver a few of the thousands of letters sent by job-seekers.

But Jim Farley's post office experts never fail. No matter how illegible the scrawl or how change the directions, the letters always reach Bilbo.

Here are specimens taken from envelopes he has actually received: Mr. Bill Bo; Theodore Bilbo; Governor Bilbo; Smither Bilbo; Mr. thea G. Bilbo, State clerk; Senator Bill Bo, in the White House, Washington, D. C.

In some cases the envelope does not even bear his name. But if it comes to Washington, it is marked from any point in Mississippi, postal authorities deliver it to Bilbo.

A Negro addressed an envelope with the words, "Master Bilbo, Wash. D. C." Another bore simply "United States Senator, Washington," and another "Washington house in car Senate office Building."

Bilbo is honored, but he is no reason why he should get all of this mail. Some of it, he insists, should go to his colleague, Senator Pat Harrison.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, May 31.—A dozen practical springboards for Miss Carlie's ideal, and the two joined forces to establish the studio.

HOPEFUL, I speeded in interest with Miss Carlie at her office in the Astor, discussing the proposed plan. The National Studio, she explained, is not designed to be a commercial enterprise, nor will it be a racket to exploit young students. Limiting itself to the classic, neither will it compete with the established academic school.

It must necessarily be a self-supporting scheme, but its prime purpose is to develop authentic knowledge of professional technique in preparation for the classic, and to foster a general interest in such play among the lay public.

Miss Carlie spoke enthusiastically of the studio's purpose to the public, who are interested in the play, which she said is a practical scheme to give young people a chance to learn the technique of professional technique in preparation for the classic, and to foster a general interest in such play among the lay public.

It is her belief that the general public will only be too eager to attend future production, when the are completely done. Part of the summer course, which will last from June 8 to August 5, will be

GUARDIAN AND GIRL HELD UP BY FEDERAL

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31.—UP—United States immigration authorities extended a cold reception today to six-year old Chiena Lydia Smith, thrilled at the prospect of her first glimpse of an American metropolis with her new father.

The seven-year-old (Tibetan) girl arrived here today aboard the Union liner, Maine, with her father, C. Smith, retired Denver real estate dealer.

Both were questioned aboard the ship at an Embarcadero dock until a special board of inquiry decided whether to permit the child entry to the United States.

Smith told the officers that he legally adopted the girl, who is an orphan. He said she was "given" to him by a French woman who "had other things to think about."

For five years, he said, he has boarded Chiena on the Isle of France and has made annual trips to her. He exhibited adoption papers, which the French consul had signed there.

If the papers are considered adequate, the girl and Smith will be permitted to enter the country to begin a new life. He will have to report for proper papers or await verification of those he has.

It is her belief that the general public will only be too eager to attend future production, when the are completely done. Part of the summer course, which will last from June 8 to August 5, will be

YOUR HEALTH

Some Plants and Animals Are Poisonous to The Human Digestive System

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

WE HAVE talked about food infections and food poisoning resulting from some change occurring in an otherwise perfectly healthy article of diet. Now we will take up the subject of certain plants and some animals that are natural poisons. Probably the best known and most common cause of severe poisoning is that of a certain form of mushroom. Many kinds of mushrooms are very delicious and perfectly harmless. Other forms are extremely poisonous.

There are many ways of determining the good from the bad. I have been told by different individuals many and varied ways of distinguishing the safe kind, but outside of a few varieties, the difference to me is not so striking as to make me certain. So, I have formed the habit of allowing an expert to make the decision, and then I insist on his eating some of them first while I observe the results. If he lives, I feel safe in following his example. I am informed that the amanita and volvaria types are the cause of fatal accidents, but sometimes the difference between them and others is not so distinctly marked as to relieve all my fears. Even mushroom experts are sometimes mistaken.

Some Fish Poisonous

Fish are probably next in the list. Only a few of the fish found outside the tropics contain natural poisons, but at certain times some common fish may develop poisonous substances.

At the spawning season, the roe of different mushrooms, the pike, the sturgeon family, and the varbel have been known to cause serious trouble. Mussels occasionally contain poisons.

In the tropics, many fish are harmful. Puffer fish, balloon fish, and globe fish are always to be avoided. It is said that in Japan, the fugu is so poisonous that it is often eaten for suicidal purposes.

It is quite possible for external poisons to get into foods, either intentionally or by accident. Irritating substances, such as arsenic, lead, mercury, and insecticides, can get into the food and cause pain, cramps, and diarrhea, and be mistaken for diphtheria poisoning.

Cautious potash, used in cleaning cooking utensils is not always cleaned out of the vessel and can cause fatal poisoning. Ergotism sometimes results from a fungus that develops in the flowers of rye and other grains, causing either an acute or chronic poisoning, with resulting nervous and convulsive symptoms or even gangrenous conditions. Old sprouting potatoes have been known to cause trouble and should be used cautiously.

The Matter of Diet

Faulty diet, such as an excess of certain types of food, or a deficiency of other types, opens the way to diseased conditions such as scurvy, beri-beri, or pellagra.

Eating too fast, eating too much, eating unbalanced mixtures, and eating when exhausted may produce the occasion for gastro-intestinal upsets. Unripe fruit and uncooked vegetables are guilty in many cases of so-called indigestion.

There is another kind of poisoning from food in which the food is perfectly good, fresh, and uncontaminated, yet much distress follows eating and is due to the individual peculiarity of the person himself. These are called food allergies, and are a condition of your own system, which causes certain types of food to react badly for you.

Many individuals are hypersensitive to such foods as shell fish, strawberries, tomatoes, pork, eggs, milk, and many other items, because of various reactions in different persons. Strawberries, fish, tomatoes, and cheese are apt to cause urticaria or hives. Cereals, pork, and milk may cause various skin diseases, such as eczema. Eggs may cause eczema and symptoms of asthma.

These peculiarities are often inherited. Some of these may be overcome by the patient eating small amounts of the offending food often, and gradually increasing the amount taken in the same manner that hay fever is controlled by using small doses of the offending pollen and increasing the tolerance.

Dr. Chrisman offers readers the privilege of addressing questions to him care of this column. He will answer questions of general interest in his regular daily column on this page.

Profiles For Today

Walgreen Dislikes Marxian Theories

By TALBOT LAKE

A FEW years ago in the Midwest West they picked an "average man" who typified the American who went about his business, was independent, and was entirely devoid of "isms." It now develops that a middle class man need not be the only average one. Some wealthy men come under the same category. We mean Charles R. Walgreen, the drug store titan, who set off a figurative bomb under the communist seats of University of Chicago officials when he withdrew his niece from the institution on the charge that she was being taught communist doctrine there.

Mr. Walgreen certainly was exceedingly wrought up, with the result that the Legislature investigated the U. of C. faculty. Despite many denials and illustrations pointing to straight Americanism at the university, you can't sell the idea to Mr. Walgreen. His conception of Americanism requires white and blue along with the red.

His career, while not average in a business sense, of course, nevertheless is typical of the self-made man. Born on a farm in Knox County, Ill., he attended a small town business college. In Dixon, Ill., he became a druggist's apprentice. After borrowing $2,000, he bought a drug store in Chicago. From this start he built a great chain, until now he is the head of nearly 500 Walgreen stores. It was not as easy as it sounds, but the growth of his holdings has been both fast and consistent, without even the depression proving an obstacle.

Recently Mr. Walgreen gave up a luxurious apartment in Chicago and bought a $75,000 house so situated that he could walk to work. Another, and purely American, reason was that he wanted to have to pass his original drug store in going to the office. That is better than having a picture of it on the wall of his business sanctum, yet it's the same idea.

When She Fails

When the growing girl suddenly begins to get poor marks in school, or when she begins to show temperamental at home, she may need medical attention, not a scolding, warns Dr. Charles Gilmore Kerley, famous child specialist. Particularly important are the growing girl's eating habits.

Formal Cottons Gain Much Favor

By IRENE VAIL

New York—"Juniors are yearning for these sheer cotton evening frocks," is the announcement made by a leading stylist recently. In the group was the dress at left, whose jacket may button at back or front. Flower colors are emphasized. The T-shirt navy and white print and the red and white lead are conspicuous examples of this class of frock. One off-shoulder, folded collar of one, and the extended effective trim of the other are effective treatments.

Now is the time for the woman who longs for big hats to wear them. They need to be anchored to the coiffure though, an elastic usually doing the trick. Your hat may be unrelated to any detail of the costume, but your handbag should be definitely related to either shoes, frock, belt or jewelry. Clips, still fashionable, are made to match bags or bracelets, and handbags may be any color or fabric. There is growing interest in the box bag. Mesh and filigree effects are in good order.

Felt buckles have a new fashion. They are elongated to cover almost the entire front of the belt. While a great deal of light, or ray, composition jewelry is being shown for summer there are also some important Oriental designs in which turquoise and silver feature prominently.

Cosmetic jewelry remains an extremely useful in helping to soften the various parts of the face. The highball earrings are new in vogue.

Guide to Charm

Heads Up for A Chin Line of Symmetry

By JACQUELINE BUNT

IF YOU carry your head smartly, your chin line has a better chance to stay young and your neck smooth, lithe and graceful enough to inspire any man. Women have a bad habit of blaming their years and weight for double chins, but actually they have little to do with the case unless they are excessive.

Haven't you noticed double chins occur indiscriminately whether you are young or old, fat or thin? What have you all in common? If you look carefully you will see that poor posture is to blame.

You will let your head droop forward so that it rests on your shoulders at an ugly slant. This continued drooping forward tends to strain and stretch the muscles at the back of the neck while it lets those in front about the throat become flabby and loose and hang in folds.

To cure or prevent a double chin, start at the root of the trouble—the base of the neck. Place your hand on the knobby spot back between the upper part of your shoulders and blades, then straighten up, pulling the head up and back until the hump disappears. There is where you must concentrate your attention.

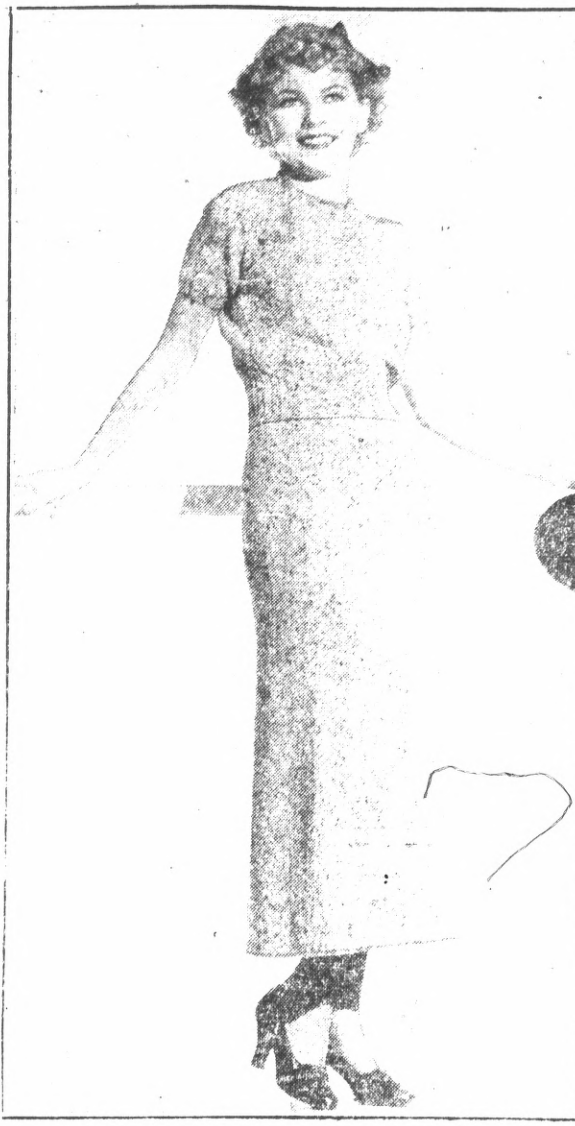

Remember, the head is heavy and if you want to carry it easily and gracefully it must be exactly balanced on top of the slender, bony column that is your spine. Hold it there consciously at first and exercise daily to strengthen the poor muscles that have been pulled and strained and those that have been allowed to grow flabby.

Avoid high pillows or anything that tends to push your head off center. Get glasses if you need glasses. Often a near-sighted person unconsciously pokes the head forward like an owl when reading or doing any work that requires close attention. The proper position for the head is with the center of the outer tips of your shoulder.

Follow carefully the exercises we have already given for improving the posture and strengthening the entire spine. Of course if you have a double chin of long standing or a fleshy "downy" hump, across the junction of the neck and shoulders it will not disappear at once. Neck exercises, massage by an expert and the use of a good astingent are all necessary to broken results. But good posture given sufficient time will correct these common faults.

Try this exercise: Lie flat on the tummy, face downward, arms out. Extend all the sit in your lungs, then rear the head up and back, pulling the entire body into a seal-like position. Remember to use the neck and shoulder muscles for this. Repeat five to ten times.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "I would like to have my hair shined quite short for the summer, but my friends tell me that this is no longer fashionable. What do you think?" —Coe.

ANSWER: If you are going camping, or touring or even staying at home to work in your garden, play tennis and picnic, then I think that you would be sensible in having a short haircut—regardless of the fashion of the moment. Your hair will be specially nice this way if it has some natural curl. Have the ends feathered and keep them long enough to give some softness to your face, but there will probably be occasions when you want to wear more feminine clothes, and a hair cut that is too severe will detract from their loveliness.

QUESTION: "I do not like to use hair cream, but I feel that it is necessary. I do not like it, but since most of the girls in my group use it, I feel rather out of place with my hair as nature left it." —Anne.

ANSWER: The first rule is to use it not at all. The second rule is to use it from the side of the spoon, never from the top. Also, do not use the plate to get every drop. When bread or crackers are served with soup, they should not be broken into the soup. This is bad form. They are eaten separately and as an accompaniment to the soup.

Engaged Girl Rates a Party From Friends

By JUDITH WILSON

TO THE girl with a diamond on her left hand, spring is a time of parties. Her friends are glad to have a good excuse for jolly parties and every girl is entitled to at least one shower of useful gifts from her closest friends.

A miscellaneous shower is always safe, but if the hobbies and habits of the engaged couple are known some other form of shower or a recipe shower might be cleverly carried out, with novel refreshments served in the pretty kitchen ware that serves as gifts for the meal. Or it might be a garden shower with pretty flower pots, wedding tools, shovels or even a lawn chair.

The first of today's menus is for a more formal party—the second is especially nice for a garden or garden shower. Here are some unusually good recipes:

- LUNCHEONS
Ginger-Fruit Cocktails
Breasts of Chicken in Cream Gravy
Biscuits Assorted Relishes
Buttered Asparagus Tips
Orange Sherbet
Individual Bride's Cakes
Coffee
- Rhubarb Highballs
Cheese Crisps
Baked Beans in Individual Casseroles
Assorted Sandwiches
Spring Salad
Strawberry Tarts
Chicken Breasts in Cream Gravy

Use only the breasts of the chickens, one good sized chicken will furnish four servings. The rest of the meat can be boiled with a bay leaf, carrot, onion and sprig of parsley and furnish a rich broth for soup and meat for creaming or salads. Wash and dry the pieces of breast, season well with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Sauté until golden brown in half butter and half lard or vegetable shortening. When well browned remove the pieces of chicken to a large casserole. Blend the broth with the grapping and add half hot water and half cream, make a thin gravy. Season well with salt and pepper. Pour over the chicken breast, cover and bake in a slow oven until very tender, about an hour and a half. If you wish sherry flavoured may be added to the same a few minutes before you are ready to serve.

Rhubarb Highballs
Cut in small pieces enough pink rhubarb to make a large casserole. Blend the broth with the grapping and add half hot water and half cream, make a thin gravy. Season well with salt and pepper. Pour over the chicken breast, cover and bake in a slow oven until very tender, about an hour and a half. If you wish sherry flavoured may be added to the same a few minutes before you are ready to serve.

When Martin was a little lad, his parents did his talking for him whenever anyone addressed him. This is a common habit among parents of young children, and deprives the youngsters of learning to speak for themselves. Now when Martin looks to his parents to answer for him, as he has been taught to expect, they tighten their lips, against answering. It isn't fair to the boy, who still needs prompting over the tight places.

Flavor with one-half teaspoon ground extract. Carefully fold in the beaten whites of five eggs to which a speck of salt has been added. Bake in a square pan in a moderate oven. When slightly cool cut the cake into rectangles, frost on all sides with white frosting and decorate with silver grapes while the frosting is still moist.

MODERN WOMEN

Two Letters About Two Parties of Entirely Different Natures

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

WARMER weather and warmer social instincts come hand-in-hand. The great week-end season is upon us, and almost anything is likely to happen. There are party goers and party givers, and it takes all manner of give and take in other ways, too, to make a pleasant summer.

You and Your Child

Parents Did Talking For Him

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

NINE-YEAR-OLD Martin has always been a quiet child. His parents have always known this, but they seem just to have come to the realization that he is shy to a fault with adults. Other children of Martin's age, they observe, can hold up their own end with strangers, and they are disappointed that Martin cannot.

MRS. GOWARD

A question addressed to the boy generally has to be repeated several times before he can get up the courage to answer it. On one occasion he looked bewilderedly from the neighbor who had addressed him to his parents, and then turned and walked away without answering. The neighbor had asked a simple question, "How are you getting along in school?" "He is setting along splendidly," mother answered, for Martin, when he was out of earshot, "But he is a peculiar child. He never talks about himself. Doesn't like to."

Later, however, Martin was scolded for being rude. "When people speak to you, you must answer," mother emphasized. "And when you speak, don't grouch."

The outlook for Martin's social success is bleak. And his parents certainly are not helping him acquire self-reliance and confidence. He shows little disapproval and feels dejected when his spirit needs to be roused. To face strangers—adult strangers at least—takes enthusiasm and courage.

When Martin was a little lad, his parents did his talking for him whenever anyone addressed him. This is a common habit among parents of young children, and deprives the youngsters of learning to speak for themselves. Now when Martin looks to his parents to answer for him, as he has been taught to expect, they tighten their lips, against answering. It isn't fair to the boy, who still needs prompting over the tight places.

Flavor with one-half teaspoon ground extract. Carefully fold in the beaten whites of five eggs to which a speck of salt has been added. Bake in a square pan in a moderate oven. When slightly cool cut the cake into rectangles, frost on all sides with white frosting and decorate with silver grapes while the frosting is still moist.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: My husband and I have been married five years and would like to celebrate by having some sort of party. My sister says that it's a bid for pre-arranged engagements. Do you think it is? I don't want to put my friends under an obligation, for every one is so hard up just now, but on the other hand we do want to give the party. What would you suggest doing?" Mrs. R. M.

Have the party without mentioning the occasion. Give any sort of party you want, invite your friends and say nothing about why you are giving it. Some of your friends, undoubtedly, know why and may pass the word along—which you cannot help. If a kid point-blank why you are having a party, just laugh it off and say you feel like having one, or make any excuse you like.

Say It Casually

Some time during the evening—or afternoon, if it's an afternoon celebration—you may tell why you are moved to draw your friends to you, but don't make a point of it.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: Do you consider it proper for a young girl to invite a boy for a week-end at her home? My daughter wants to ask a young man she met last winter to week-end with us. My husband and I feel that it is a strange thing for her to do, and are opposed to it. She says we are old-fashioned. I suppose we are, but it just does not seem like the thing to do, in our opinion. What do you say?"

There is no impropriety in your daughter inviting a young man to week-end with you. She should be questioned closely, however, as to the young man and what his attitude is toward her. I mean by that, if the young man has indicated no interest she would be placed in a very awkward position. He may be a well-to-do, successful man, but if he is without a good reason—such as another engagement or something of the sort.

May Show Interest

If the young man has shown an interest in her and she has every reason to suppose he would welcome the chance to visit her parents, that's another matter.

It might be pleasant all around if your daughter included another girl in her invitation. In your day, a girl, I judge, would have been considered bold as brass to invite a boy to visit her, but your day and your daughter are far enough apart to have brought in an entirely new set of customs.

It would shock you, I am sure, were your daughter to receive an invitation from some boy to visit him in his home, yet some mothers see nothing irregular in such an invitation assuming, of course, that the boy's parents are reputable and have some knowledge of their sons' intention.

House parties for young people are not at all unusual, and modern parents who know their job is to see to it that their children have as much fun in their own homes as they possibly could elsewhere.

Since your daughter has suggested having this young man as a guest, suggest to her that she ask some other girl or even other girls and boys. It will up-se the household routine, I know, but it looks to me as though you were in for it, anyway. For this we have children.

Short Cuts

Evaporated milk will whip exactly like cream if these directions are followed: Bring the unopened can to a boil in a pan of water. Remove it from water and give it time to chill thoroughly in the refrigerator before attempting to whip it.

Fine-grained cereals for coating croquettes, or fish or chops, sliced eggplant or tomato, increases palatableness and nutritive value.

Try adding a pinch of soda to the beaten egg white when making omelets. The result will be omelets that will stay fluffy without the pinch of soda, omelets are inclined to rise in the pan only to collapse before they are served.

AAA LICENSE POWER TO BE OVERHAULED

WASHINGTON, May 31.—UP—Chairman E. D. Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee said tonight the administration would abandon some licensing provisions of the AAA as a result of the Supreme Court's adverse decision on the NRA.

Smith said his committee would bring to the floor early next week an amendment to the AAA which would eliminate the licensing clause as it pertains to interstate operations.

KNOW NOTHING

Interstate transactions, he said, probably would be controlled in the future through regulation.

Agricultural experiment officials professed to know nothing about the new plan. Arthur H. Smith said he had reviewed the proposal with them and that all were in entire agreement.

MODIFY ACT

"I am sure that the act as they know nothing about it," he declared.

Plan to modify the licensing and marketing provisions of the present act also were discussed tonight in a radio address by Senator J. P. Borge, Democrat, Idaho.

AMEND LEGISLATION

"The licensing, features, and marketing provisions will be restricted to interstate transactions and a program of competition with the states can be set up to deal with the entire industry, both interstate and intrastate," he said.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace signed three amended milk licenses today for California, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Boston, and a new marketing agreement for the expanded milk industry, but it was pointed out that this had no bearing on future plans for the AAA program.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference earlier that he thought there was grave doubt as to whether the AAA was legal.

STRIPPED OF POWER

WASHINGTON, May 31.—UP—The Supreme Court's NRA decision has stripped the Federal government of more power than anyone realizes, and the people must decide quickly whether to restore that authority, President Roosevelt said today.

Without making any specific suggestions, he gave the impression that a constitutional amendment was one way of restoring the Federal government's authority. Asked if that was the specific solution he had in mind, Mr. Roosevelt said not necessarily.

Post Ready For New N. Y. Dash

LOS ANGELES, May 31.—UP—Monday, if the weather and his motor are right, Wiley Post will rocket to the stratosphere for the fourth time in an attempted high altitude dash to New York, he said tonight.

Post arrived at Union Air Terminal yesterday from Bartlesville, Okla., and spent today supervising the overhaul of the powerful super-charged motor that he hopes will bring his white monoplane to New York in eight to nine hours.

FLOOD HAVOC IN COLORADO IS APPALING

DENVER, Colo., May 31.—UP—New flood threats arose tonight to menace stricken southern Wyoming and eastern Colorado.

While remnants of the water ravaged area, a toll of nearly two score missing and dead, and prepared to repair property damage estimated in the millions of dollars, several creeks and rivers were reported rising again, and at least three towns in northeastern Colorado were threatened.

NEW FLOODS

The South Platte river was reported out of its banks above Sterling, Colo., and had spread to a width of three to three miles.

Crest of the new flood moved down upon Sterling, largest city in the northern section of the state, at about six miles an hour, and was expected to strike there sometime tonight.

Atwood and Merino, smaller towns directly in the path of the flood, were partially evacuated as warnings were spread through the entire valley by radio and by patrols of officers.

CATTLE MOVED

It was believed Atwood and Merino would be inundated to a depth of several feet, and that the water might flow in the main streets of Sterling.

Livestock men rushed their cattle to the hills along the north and south slopes of the Platte valley, and no considerable loss to farm animals was expected. Several farm houses near the banks of the river, however, had already been flooded as high as second story windows.

CRENS OVERFLOWING

No loss of life was anticipated, since ample warning had been given.

In southern Wyoming, two creeks, the Big Bear, and the Horseshoe, were reported running out of their banks.

The Big Bear already had claimed five lives, and the Horseshoe had taken two.

TWENTY KNOWN DEAD

Meanwhile other flood stricken areas took stock of the situation left by the torrential flows of last night and early today.

Twenty persons were known dead, nineteen more were reported
